

My Name is Amazuiro Sylverline Chioma, I am 27 years Old.

I was born in a small village in the eastern part of Nigeria. Growing up was quiet, and I spent most of my early younger years living with relatives in Urban city Lagos, Nigeria. Coming from the East to the West exposed me to different cultures and a huge culture shock as well.

In High School I was very passionate about a lot of things but my favourite was Literature, I enjoyed reading a lot, I would read everything, I was highly inquisitive and wanted to know everything, I read about history, culture, politics, science, religion and so many books, but my favourite were on politics and women empowerment, I loved this book called "JOYS OF MOTHERHOOD" by Buchi Emecheta.

I wanted to be a writer and then a Journalist.. Unfortunately for me those dreams were short lived as I could not go on to study at the university level even after getting admission to study mass communication in the university because of the financial situation of my parents.

I moved to the Middle East in search of greener pastures with the help of a friend, even with just a high school certificate. Because of my outspokenness I got a job as a telesales representative.

With this exposure I discovered other career paths, I fell in love with a career in digital marketing and project management, I started taking some courses in digital marketing online and this really peaked my interest, with the way the world has digitised and the use of artificial intelligence as become very important, having worked in the real estate in Dubai, I have been exposed to a lot of interest and ideologies.

I have been in leadership positions in my place of work, managed people and learnt a lot of leadership skills that helped me get to understand people better, I would really love an opportunity to further my education which is a dream regardless of the situation, and this opportunity by the University of Memphis has given me hope that I can make my dreams of being a marketer which is an area I just found great passion in with my experience so far.

I am confident that with the interdisciplinary nature of this programme in a prestigious school such as University of Memphis my dreams would finally come to pass.