

My Name is Chisom Kenechukwu Okudo, I Am 32 years old

I was born in Lagos Nigeria and I spent most of my younger years in Northern Nigeria, which exposed me to different backgrounds and cultures and it was an eye opener to different views on life and society in general.

In High School I was passionate about a lot of things. I was mostly good at sports as I played soccer so well. I enjoyed reading and loved to build things, i would spend hours repairing damaged electrical appliances , screwing and unscrewing trying to fix them.

As soon as I got older and I had other ideas, I ventured into working with one of the biggest flour mills in Nigeria which was Dangote flour mills in an assistant warehouse manager position which I earned from my hard work and leadership qualities.

I moved to the middle east and got into the hospitality industry and this was a big step for me. I started working with a hotel as a guest relation officer.

With this exposure into a new career path, I fell in love with the hospitality industry, which exposed me to people from different walks of life. I started taking some online courses to expand my skills.

I have been in leadership position in my place of work, managed people and learnt alot of leadership skills that helped me get to understand people better, i would really love an opportunity to further my education which is a dream , and this opportunity by the university of Memphis have given me hope that i can make my dreams of going further with my career in the hospitality industry which is one the fastest growing industries in the world which is an area i just found great passion in with my experience so far.

I am confident that with the nature of this programme in a prestigious school such as University of Memphis my dreams would finally be realised.
